

Wavelink Appoints Senior Technical Manager for APAC region

In response to strong sales growth, Wavelink Communications has appointed Garth Coulson, Senior Technical Manager for the KIRK range of wireless systems. Wavelink Communications is the exclusive distributor of KIRK in Australia and New Zealand, with the appointment signaling an expansion of technical support services into the entire Asia Pacific region.

Coulson will act as a technical specialist for the new KIRK 3000 top-end system to be released later in 2005. Reporting to Wavelink Technical Director, Nigel Keswick, Coulson will spearhead Wavelink's support of the KIRK 3000 into the APAC region with responsibility for providing technical advice and feedback to KIRK telecom in Denmark. In keeping with Wavelink's commitment to the channel, Coulson will also act as an additional technical resource to Wavelink's NSW resellers for all products, including the OpenCom and Blick suite of products.

Coulson is a highly skilled engineer with a career spanning 18 years in the telecommunications industry covering a wide range of technologies and products. Over this period, Coulson has held technical support positions at Telstra, NRMA and Fujitsu. Coulson brings extensive technical skills to Wavelink customers including knowledge of PABXs, ISDN, QSIG, E&M, DID and PSTN.

Commenting on the appointment, Wavelink Director, Ilan Rubin said, "We see this appointment as an opportunity to consolidate steady sales growth. Coulson will be a real asset to Wavelink dealers and clients. He has a strong track record working with blue-chip ICT companies and brings to our services an outstanding knowledge in telecommunications engineering."
